

I had the pleasure of working with Warren Barry during 2006 and the spring of 2007. I wanted to build a home in the Gainesville area of Florida and wanted someone with expertise and creative input for a set of plans. I'm a contractor on the Seacoast area of New Hampshire and have worked with many designers and architects. I've built 2 other homes for myself including the one I'm living in now, with plans that were done by people that were more draftsmen then designers. I've visited Florida for many years and always have been fascinated by some of the architectural possibilities that could be explored especially with stucco and the access to the outside because of the climate. I wanted someone who could help me transform the pile of photographs of homes, rough floor plans and the location and topography of my lot into a functional and attractive home. My budget was not unlimited as this is a 2nd home for now and I needed help with that aspect of the project to bring some of my wild ideas to the reality of a budget. I interviewed 4 people to help with the plans for this home and I chose Warren. I'm very happy with my decision and can't say enough about his design abilities and creative input on my plan. His technical ability was extremely helpful in making changes as was his patience in my design making timeframe. Warren was very professional with communication during the planning process and was wonderful at returning phone calls and emails and can't say enough about his customer service in his help with my project. In dealing with other subcontractors and suppliers in Florida I realize more and more how lucky I was to have found Warren not only for his creative and design abilities and for the amount of caring and soul he was willing to put into my project. As for my dilemma about hiring a Architect as opposed to a draftsman ,when I see my home being built I realize I made a good choice in asking Warren Barry and WEB Designs for his help.
